The BLACK IMMIGRATION NETWORK was born out of an understanding that our shared African ancestry and similar experiences with racism and exploitation in the U.S. and globally provide a common frame of reference for joint efforts in the fight for economic, social and racial justice. We stand against the scapegoating of immigrants and anyone appearing to be foreign. We stand against pitting of African Americans against immigrant workers driven by underpaying one group of workers. We stand for a just and inclusive economy of fair and equal wages for all workers. We seek and support leaders and policies that will eliminate the disproportionate negative effects of globalization, racism and economic exploitation on everyone, especially black communities.

Join us at our 4th National Gathering in Miami, Florida on

WELCOME FROM NPNA

Welcome to Miami: sixth annual NIIC, 2013

Welcome to the sixth National Immigrant Integration Conference, the signature event of the National Partnership for New Americans. This conference is the largest gathering in the nation on the challenges and opportunities of fully integrating our 41 million foreign born and their children into our communities, our economy, and our democracy. We give a big thank-you to our hosts, Maria Rodriguez and the Florida Immigration Coalition, and Alberto Ibargüen and the John S and James L Knight Foundation.

During this year, our nation has debated and advanced the question of immigration reform and immigrant integration more than at any time in recent history. In the near future, immigration reform will pass and be signed into law, and the nation will ask the question, “OK, now what happens?”

Because of NIIC and the work of all of our partners, we will have an answer! A cross section of the nation’s leading policy experts, government leaders, advocates, academics, labor leaders, business leaders, funders, and immigrant and refugee leaders have gathered before in Chicago, in Denver, in Boston, in Seattle, in Baltimore, and this year in Miami to work and plan for a successful “nation of immigrants.” We are thrilled with the vital role that this conference has taken in bringing together many partners to advance the field of immigrant and refugee integration.

We have worked together, building plans for an America where the talents of immigrants and their host communities are fully engaged in creating a stronger, more inclusive economy and democracy for the benefit of all. We have plans for naturalization, building welcoming communities, implementation of immigration reform, community asset building, vocational English and adult ed, parent engagement, refugee resettlement with dignity, worker education and protection, entrepreneurialism, and early childhood education, just to name a few areas of work.

We thank our cosponsors and coplanners, the Migration Policy Institute, Welcoming America, the Refugee Council USA, the New Americans Campaign, the Center for Community Change, and the National Association of Latino Community Asset Builders. In addition to Knight Foundation, we would like to thank the funders supporting NIIC 2013, including the JM Kaplan Fund, the Four Freedoms Fund, Marguerite Casey Foundation, Citibank Foundation, the Bill and Melinda Gates Foundation, Walmart, Wells Fargo Bank, Service Employees International Union, the Annie E Casey Foundation, the AFL-CIO, Seth and Suzette Masters, the United Food and Commercial Workers Union, and Lutheran Immigrant and Refugee Services.

This year’s NIIC is designed to allow for maximum participation, the sharing of ideas, and the advancement of an intentional conversation about our collective action strategy to move immigrant integration forward in the coming year.

This has been an exciting year for the National Partnership for New Americans and our member organizations. In addition to working for immigration reform and the NIIC, we have helped to drive forward the conversation about immigrant integration within the immigration reform debate. We have also worked to launch offices of new Americans at the state and municipal levels across the nation.

The partnership has continued our ongoing vigorous campaign to reduce the barriers to US citizenship. In years past, we successfully advocated for a halt to the rapid increases in naturalization fees and a standardized fee waiver to assist low-income immigrants desiring to become US citizens. This year, the partnership has built the case for an actual reduction in the cost of naturalization. Our advocacy has included research by Dr. Manuel Pastor, at the University of Southern California, opinion pieces in The New York Times, action by the US Conference of Mayors, and energetic education of public officials. As a result, the US Citizenship and Immigration Services has committed to do a formal fee study, looking to reduce unfair barriers to citizenship.

With the support of the Open Societies Foundation, partnership members have assisted 23,725 immigrants to become citizens and 3,003 undocumented youth to apply for their Deferred Action Legal Status. The partnership has worked with national allies like CCC, CLINIC, ILRC, NALEO, and many others to prepare for the implementation of the eventual immigration reform victory and the giant wave of people who will finally be able to begin full integration into our society.

So welcome to Miami and NIIC 2013! We look forward to an exciting 2014 as we work together for the full inclusion of new Americans into our nation.

Sincerely,

Eva Millona

WELCOME FROM FLIC

Welcome to Miami: integrated city that works

On behalf of the Florida Immigrant Coalition we’d like to extend a warm welcome to Florida and to Miami NIIC 6. We are grateful to all who have worked so hard to make it possible, including you!

Over a dozen organizations invested time and care strategically and creatively to put a holistic program together that would honor the transformative power of integration. Before you, there are 30+ sessions with 150+ presenters, seven big-picture plenaries with national figures, intentional peer-learning and strategy-oriented spaces, and 20 dinner excursions into Miami’s vibrant neighborhoods.

There are ample opportunities to enjoy learning and networking. However, we have an even more ambitious goal.

Instead of disconnected silos, imagine the bold and dynamic immigrant rights movement coming together with a larger and more diverse immigrant serving field; refugee resettlement, municipal governments, and asset builders.

Building on five years of successful gatherings, Miami NIIC 2013 has been designed intentionally with synergy and strategy spaces in the hopes of weaving together our field for a greater, more cohesive whole, as evidenced by a shared vision and joint action document — a declaration of sorts.

Our hope is to emerge from this convening with an innovative new movement of inclusion — maximizing the transformative power of immigrant integration to expand our democracy and enliven the American Dream for all to enjoy.

In unity,

Maria Rodriguez
Executive Director
Florida Immigrant Coalition

WELCOME FROM KNIGHT FOUNDATION

Welcome to Miami: city of the future

There are over 40 million people living in the United States who are foreign-born. No other city in America understands this better than Miami where more than half of all residents were born in another country.

We are an American city where immigrants are the majority. Their rich tapestry makes Miami one of the most culturally vibrant and dynamic places in the world. While often referred to as a gateway between North America and South America, Miami's immigrant diversity reaches around the globe.

Many associate Miami with images of South Beach, CSI Miami, Miami Vice, and an amazing skyline. But those who live here understand that it is our diversity that makes the city so exciting. From Little Haiti to Little Havana, Miami is made up of millions of individual stories about people coming to America to start anew.

Hosted by the National Partnership for New Americans and the Florida Immigrant Coalition, this great conference gives us an opportunity to help make these immigrant integration stories possible.

To do so, we will focus on:

- Maximizing active citizenship,
- Making communities more welcoming,
- Developing human capital,
- Building our organizations, and
- Protecting our rights and expanding our freedoms.

In essence, this conference is about helping immigrants engage with the community we proudly call the United States of America, strengthening the social fabric, the economy, and our democracy. Let us work together so that every immigrant has a chance at living our ultimate story: the American Dream.

Sincerely,

Alberto Ibarra

Learn about dynamic artwork
“Immigration — Wall of Borders” and artist-activist Huong

“Immigration — The Wall of Borders” (below left) was created during 2010 and continues to grow to this day. This work sets out to recognize that the United States is a multicultural nation that has been founded thanks to the effort of immigrants. This project strives to motivate the public to reflect on their own ancestors and understand the fundamental input that immigrants have made throughout history.

“Immigration — The Wall of Borders,” just like the previous murals of Huong, is a dynamic and interactive work that invites the public to get involved and contribute. Visitors can leave their signatures in the mural, or they can add their own opinions and comments regarding migration issues.

Huong is an artist, social activist, philanthropist, and Vietnam War refugee. Along with founding the Peace Mural Foundation, she has created art to promote peace for over 30 years. Having seen the horrendous effects of war first hand, she has dedicated her life to promoting peace and sovereignty for all of humanity.

Forced into becoming an immigrant herself, she knows what it means to leave your homeland in search of opportunity and peace. Huong has participated in more than 100 expositions in the United States and Canada, and has been featured in national news outlets like The Huffington Post, The New York Times, and The Washington Post. She has been hosted by the US Department of Homeland Security and National Council of La Raza and has been sponsored by the American Library Association.

Working Across Sectors to Create a Welcoming America

SUNDAY, 5:00 TO 5:30 PM
SYMPHONY I, II

Successful immigration policy requires that immigrants are able to integrate fully into cities and towns across our nation. Not only must immigrants commit to a new life here, but the broader receiving community must come together to recognize their diverse talents and give them a fair chance. Cross-sectoral, multiracial collaboration that brings together the public, private, and nonprofit sectors in order to address demographic change is a key ingredient for meaningful immigrant integration and the way to bring about a true welcome in our communities. This will not only lead to greater leadership roles for immigrants but also help localities enhance their economic and social vibrancy in the years ahead.

Immigrant Integration in Era of Global Mass Migration

TUESDAY, 8:30 TO 9:15 AM
SYMPHONY I, II

We call the United States a “nation of immigrants,” but we live in an era of global mass migration. The 41 million migrants to the United States are but a small percentage of the 232 million migrants around the world who live in a nation other than their birthplace.

In this plenary, we are joined by leading international experts for a conversation on global mass migration, both the challenges it creates and the opportunities it presents. What are the root causes of this mass migration? Which are the models of integration that are succeeding across the world, and what are the lessons from the dangerous exploitation of migrants and the violent antimigrant backlash? How do our host communities benefit from migration, and where are the greatest opportunities for migrant-led efforts for both host nation and transnational development?

America at Crossroads: Awakening Our Agency

TUESDAY, 12:45 TO 2:30 PM
SYMPHONY II, III, IV

In our pursuit of immigrant integration and efforts to build a more inclusive and equitable nation, it is critical that we understand the dynamics of social change. In this final plenary, we tap into the personal stories and experiences of our speakers to explore transformation, developing a deeper sense of history and a collective vision for what is possible. From criminalization to internment camps, from queer families to domestic workers, we come from a long line of unique but interconnected struggles that seek to fulfill the promise of full citizenship and true democracy.

We depart Miami with a sense of purpose — collectively constructing our theory and practice of change — while celebrating the transformative power of integration and the arc of history that inevitably bends towards justice.

ORANGE TRACK SESSIONS

Human Capital Development

In order to ensure that US immigration policies succeed in the long run in making local communities and our country more vibrant, cohesive, and successful, a range of actions must be taken to support the economic, linguistic, and civic integration of immigrants and refugees and their children.

These include intentional support for relevant, high-quality services throughout the education pipeline, effective workforce training, affordable health care, and other work supports, as well as access to efforts that assist with small business development, credit counseling, home-ownership counseling, and mainstream banking.

Sessions in this double track will cover a range of current issues and effective policies and practices within these fields, with a focus on group interaction and strategizing for how all those affiliated with the conference can take urgently needed steps to support immigrants and refugees in building their human capital and family assets and pursuing their dreams for a better life. Lemons to Lemonade: Transforming Education, Workforce Training for Adult Immigrants

MONDAY, 10:15 TO 11:45 AM
TENOR

Immigrants and refugees seeking English as a second language, basic education, and workforce training face extremely poor odds of finding an available program that will meet their learning needs. Most systems are still organized around a sequential model, expecting these adults to spend years attending English classes, several more years filling basic education gaps, and only then being able to enroll in programs offering meaningful workforce skills or credentials.

Even with high barriers to participation posed by transportation, conflicts with work schedules, and lack of affordable child care, in most parts of the country, even the most mediocre programs are oversubscribed. The passage of immigration reform will likely create significant new demands on education and training programs at a time when most of them are operating at their lowest capacities in memory. Indeed in some key states, adult education programs are faced with complete annihilation.

This learning-and-strategy session will consider the scope of challenges and promising strategies for reform in the areas of state and local coordination, effective programming for key subpopulations, and use of digital learning technologies. Participants will compile action steps that stakeholders can take to bring to scale the high-quality, effective education and training services that are needed to ensure today's immigrants are able to thrive, not merely survive, in the United States.

Combating Discriminatory, Predatory, Fringe Services in Immigrant, Refugee Communities

MONDAY, 10:15 TO 11:45 AM
PICASSO

A cross-track session with Preparing for the Path that will provide attendees with best-practice strategies to combat discriminatory, predatory, and fringe consumer and legal services in their communities. Discussion will include the development of systems for preventing and reporting predatory or illegal acts and protecting immigrant and refugee assets. This session will end by discussing the question, “What do you do about fringe or predatory actors when your organization and the broader service community doesn't have the capacity to serve all of the people seeking your services?”

Beyond providing strategies to combat discriminatory, predatory, and illegal practices, this session will ask attendees to consider how they view alternatives to fringe financial services and how they portray these services to the community. Immigrants, Affordable Care Act: Challenges, Opportunities

SOPRANO

Open enrollment in the health-insurance marketplaces (exchanges) of the Affordable Care Act (Obamacare) commenced October 1, 2013, and coverage begins January 1, 2014. Most lawfully present individuals (except Deferred Action for Childhood Arrivals grantees) have new opportunities to buy affordable, private insurance, but the marketplaces are ill-equipped to serve immigrant and limited-English-proficient individuals, as are mainstream consumer assistance programs engaged in the massive outreach, education, and enrollment activities now underway to connect uninsured Americans to health insurance.

Undocumented immigrants and DACA grantees were excluded from ACA programs and must continue to rely on a patchwork of safety-net providers and programs. Myriad challenges and opportunities exist for immigrant-serving organizations and their constituents.

In this session, participants will explore, discuss, and troubleshoot topics at the intersection of Obamacare and immigration. The session will include a brief overview of immigrants' eligibility for affordable health insurance under the ACA and identify key opportunities, challenges, priorities, and additional resources needed for immigrants in the evolving health insurance system. Leveraging New Stakeholders, Skill Sets to Address Brain Waste

ALTO

This learning and strategy session will engage participants in an exploration of several state and local efforts that are addressing barriers to foreign qualification recognition. Teams working on high-skilled-immigrant-integration projects will present case studies and initial findings from their respective states. Participants will strategize around how to advance policies and practices that address the devaluation of foreign credentials and work experience and to support immigrants and refugees in their efforts to obtain jobs commensurate with their qualifications.

Case studies will include triage efforts that busy CBOs can implement to identify and serve immigrant professionals effectively as well as policy change and funding expansion efforts. The session was developed by Jeffrey Gross, Massachusetts Immigrant and Refugee Advocacy Coalition; Abdelnasser Rashid, Illinois Coalition for Immigrant and Refugee Rights; Amanda Bergson-Shilcock, Welcoming Center for New Pennsylvanians; and the Human Capital Development work group.

Ensuring College, Workforce Success for DREAM/DACA, Young Adult Immigrants

MONDAY, 2:30 TO 4:00 PM
TENOR

It is widely known that two- and four-year post-secondary degrees are increasingly required to obtain jobs that pay a family-sustaining wage and provide pathways to longer-term economic security and mobility. Youth from immigrant and refugee families face a variety of challenges in successfully navigating post-secondary systems.

Issues related to post-secondary success present urgent challenges for those concerned with immigrant integration more generally, and particularly with regard to Deferred Action for Childhood Arrivals (DACA) and Development, Relief, and Education for Alien Minors (DREAM) acts provisions, which are unprecedented in tying immigration protections and benefits to higher education and workforce achievement. In doing so, they make the core set of US adult human-capital development systems — adult literacy and basic education, workforce training, and post-secondary education — an even more central concern of integration.

This session will provide opportunities to explore top reform issues and advocacy strategies in the areas of social and financial aid support programs and policies, reform of remediation and acceleration of nontraditional students to credit and degree attainment, and high-payoff models for low-educated adults.

The session was developed by Tere Wisell, Community College Consortium for Immigrant Education; Jill Casner-Lotto, Community College for Immigrant Education; Laura Bohorquez, United We Dream; Margie McHugh, Migration Policy Institute; and the Human Capital Development work group.

Building Financial Capability in Immigrant, Refugee Communities

MONDAY, 2:30 TO 4:00 PM
SOPRANO

This introductory peer-led, best-practice-based session is intended to provide the “nuts and bolts” for implementing basic asset-building programs that seek to build a financial capability of immigrants and refugees as they move towards citizenship and/or enter the financial mainstream. The session will use model examples from the field presented by grassroots community-development nonprofits to discuss issues facing immigrant and refugee financial inclusion and suggestions to overcome these challenges.

This session will seek to give practitioners the knowledge necessary to explore options for creating internal asset-building programs or connect to asset-building organizations in their communities.

Peer-led case studies will detail barriers, best practices, tools, products, program design, and innovative implementation strategies of their local asset-building programs. The session was developed by Jeremy Carter, National Association for Latino Community Asset Builders; Jane Duong, National Coalition for Asian Pacific American Community Development; and Marucci Guzman-Beard, Latino Leadership.

Movement Building: Immigrant Rights to Educational Change

MONDAY, 2:30 TO 4:00 PM
ALTO

Immigrant rights groups have been extremely successful in building a movement that mobilizes diverse stakeholders to impact change on multiple levels, namely with federal comprehensive immigrant reform. Within the last few years, many of these same organizations have transferred the energy around immigrant advocacy to the education arena, specifically related to policy reforms for English-language learners, removing barriers to school access and effective parent engagement strategies.

In this session, learn how three immigrant rights organizations, New York Immigration Coalition, CASA de Maryland, and Washington State's OneAmerica, have created initiatives to shift the K-12 system successfully to integrate the needs of immigrant communities better. Highlights include winning additional state funding for ELLs through collective impact work, partnering with international consulates to obtain IDs for parents, and supporting effective families-in-schools collaborations.

Actions to Support DACA-DREAM Youth Under 18

TUESDAY, 11:00 AM TO 12:30 PM
PICASSO

Roughly half of youth eligible for Deferred Action for Childhood Arrivals (DACA) or Development, Relief, and Education for Alien Minors (DREAM) are under 18. Their ability to access the benefits available under DACA or DREAM will be shaped significantly by whether they earn a high school diploma, as will their ability to move forward in obtaining further education and skills that will lead to family-sustaining jobs and career success.

Large numbers of immigrant youth — Latinos and English-language learners in particular — have much lower four-year high school graduation rates than their peers and much higher dropout rates. Many may be in schools and school districts that provide poor instructional services to immigrant and ELL youth or lack information about how to prepare for, choose, or afford college.

Protecting the ability for all potential DACA-DREAM youth to access legal protections and stay on track for education and workforce success should be a high priority for all in the immigrant rights movement, along with a wide range of other stakeholders in immigrant and native-born communities.

This learning and strategy session will provide spaces for sharing select education reform practices that focus on high school completion and success for immigrant youth, and it will provide strategizing around steps that key stakeholders in the conference can take to support the success of DACA-DREAM youth who are under 18 and still in school. The session was developed by Eliza Leighton, CASA de Maryland; Margie McHugh, Migration Policy Institute; and the Human Capital Development work group.

Immigrant, Refugee
Small Biz as Economic Engines

TUESDAY, 11:00 AM TO 12:30 PM
MARKET ROOM, LOBBY LEVEL

This is an introductory, peer-led, best-practice-based session that centers on innovative and proven models for catalyzing small business opportunities among immigrants and refugees, including a discussion of successfully integrating workforce and self-employment initiatives. Emphasis will be placed on the importance of access to low-cost start-up capital (small-dollar loans or lending circles) in coordination with place-based strategies (incubators and workers’ cooperatives) that can support the development of business models.

Discussion will include how to engage local government and how to make compelling arguments on the benefits of immigrant and refugee small businesses for the local and regional economy. This session will provide clear ideas of how to begin or expand small business development programs in your organization and how to connect to existing services, as well as how to make fact-based arguments on the importance of immigrant and refugee businesses to your local community. Immigrants, Refugees in ECEC Workforce: Effective
Approaches to Language,
Education, Credentialing

TUESDAY, 11:00 AM TO 12:30 PM
SOPRANO

Immigrant and refugee workers in the Early Childhood Education and Care field comprise a significant portion of formal and informal ECEC service providers and are an essential component of the future ECEC workforce given the growing and unmet need for linguistic and cultural competence in these services. However, many of these individuals continue to work at unsustainably low wages with few opportunities for advancement and often have no access to further training and education.

Furthermore, as credential requirements in these fields are increased and formalized and rating systems are implemented to promote system quality, there is a danger that employment opportunities in the ECEC field will be foreclosed for many unless education and training programs are established that address their particular needs.

Positioned at a critical intersection between immigrant workers’ advancement and immigrant children’s need for relevant, high-quality ECEC services, the session will take a practical look at strategies that can be pursued through partnerships with community colleges and other institutions to build and achieve recognition of the formal and tacit skills of the immigrant child-care workforce, as well as efforts related to the economic viability and development of ECEC workers and providers. An Unhealthy Path to Citizenship:
America’s Failure to Advance
Access to Health Care,
Economic Security

TUESDAY, 11:00 AM TO 12:30 PM
ALTO

Immigration reform is unlikely to improve aspiring citizens’ access to affordable health care, social services, and economic supports until they become lawful permanent residents or even later. That means, even if immigration reform passes, aspiring citizens may continue to be excluded from affordable health insurance programs, food stamps, and other public benefits programs for at least 10–13 years, and may be robbed of a decade’s worth of Social Security earnings. On the path to citizenship, they will face many of the same barriers to health and economic security that they already face as undocumented immigrants.

This session will address the ways in which we can change this failing status quo, both in the context of federal immigration reform and beyond. Participants will learn what’s at stake in the immigration reform debate for aspiring citizens struggling to achieve economic security and access to health care.

Participants with less experience in these issues will gain a basic understanding of immigrants’ rights to health care and the kinds of social services and economic support programs available for undocumented individuals and those on the path to citizenship. Participants with more experience will have the opportunity to share successful strategies, model practices, and examples of how immigrant-serving organizations can engage on these issues at the local, state, and national levels. They will gain new tools to defend against further restrictions in immigration reform and work toward a common vision of healthy, economically secure families and communities.

RED TRACK SESSIONS

Maximizing
Active Citizenship

Successful naturalization programs are key in assisting immigrants to make the transition from legal permanent residents to actively engaged citizens who contribute to a more welcoming democracy.

However, out of the 8.7 million legal permanent residents who were eligible for naturalization, less than nine percent naturalized in 2012. There are barriers for LPRs to attain their citizenship, and robust community naturalization programs are crucial in developing a base to advocate for social change and for inclusive municipal, state, and federal policies that address those barriers.

The Maximizing Active Citizenship Track is geared towards community and legal service providers, researchers, policy makers, and advocates to share best practices, lessons, and challenges from naturalization programs across the country, and to sustain and expand programs to benefit the communities we serve. The track also explores the future of the field, technologies, and working with both municipalities and community-based organizations to promote naturalization and community empowerment. Coleads:

ABCs of Citizenship:
Assist, Base-Build, Change

MONDAY 10:15 TO 11:45 AM
CONCERTO D

Existing naturalization programs are the perfect vehicles to drive full-cycle citizenship. Naturalization providers and community-based organizations have used different models of naturalizations programs for base building, organizational collaborations, and integrating voter engagement efforts. This session will explore different models of the continuum of citizenship and its crucial role in community empowerment and engagement. Panelists will provide examples of what has worked and what hasn’t and will lead participants into an interactive discussion of new ideas, opportunities, and challenges of developing broad civic engagement in our communities via naturalization services. Applications

CONCERTO C

US Citizenship and Immigration Services recently announced new changes to the naturalization application (N-400s), eventually transitioning toward electronic filing. It is clear that the future of naturalization application assistance is changing, but we also have much to learn from current best practices, challenges, and how the field has changed in the past. The panelists will explore these issues and engage participants in a discussion on new assistance models, partnerships, new technologies like CitizenshipWorks, and innovative ways to provide more effective and efficient application assistance through naturalization programs. Chicago, Seattle, New York, Boston, San Francisco, and other cities have been at the forefront of creating federal partnerships and implementing citywide programs to fund and promote naturalization and civic engagement and to develop immigrant-friendly and inclusive policies. Reducing Barriers Through Advocacy

MONDAY, 2:30 TO 4:00 PM
CONCERTO C

For the 8.7 million legal permanent residents eligible for naturalization, there are several barriers to overcome to attain citizenship. Community-based organizations, local municipalities, legal service providers, and researchers have worked together to reduce barriers such as high naturalization fees by advocating that US

Citizenship and Immigration Services reexamine the fee structure, making English language learning accessible, advocating that the immigration reform bill include a federal New Americans Office inside the White House, and other systematic opportunities.

This session will explore the regulatory environment for citizenship and related fields through the lens of service provision and advocacy via constituent engagement. The session was developed by the Maximizing Active Citizenship work group.

Promoting Naturalization: Strategies for Effective Engagement

TUESDAY, 11:00 AM TO 12:30 PM
CONCERTO D

There are 8.7 million legal permanent residents eligible to apply for citizenship today. But they aren't applying. Recently The New York Times did a story on eligible LPRs choosing not to become US citizens. But that's only a third of the story. Recent research, such as the Pew Hispanic Center's The Path Not Taken, has found that as much as 93 percent of the Latino population would become US citizens if it could naturalize. The second group can afford it but never get around to it.

The third and by far largest group, the working poor, simply can't afford the $680 application fee and don't necessarily qualify for fee waivers. Additionally, the report Nurturing Naturalization: Could Lowering the Fee Help, has indicated that many immigrants, especially Mexican Americans, have been priced out of citizenship.

Panelists will explore how legal service providers and community-based organizations can strategically approach different groups of LPRs through effective messaging and addressing the structural barriers that keep them from applying and take a huge step forward to fulfilling the American Dream. The session was developed by the Maximizing Active Citizenship work group.

Not Just for Geeks: Data Gathering, Management, Use

TUESDAY, 11:00 AM TO 12:30 PM
CONCERTO C

Gathering, managing, and utilizing data is important for a successful naturalization program. This session is designed for service providers and program managers who oversee naturalization-assistance programs. The session will be divided into three components: using data for outreach and targeting (legal permanent resident populations, census demographics, etc.), collecting and management applicant data (including case management software), and tracking applicants and contacts for program evaluation. The session was developed by the Maximizing Active Citizenship work group.

PURPLE TRACK SESSIONS

Preparing for the Path: Building Our Organizations' Capacities

The politics and impacts of demographic shift strongly indicate that immigration reform, which includes a path to citizenship for millions, will become a reality. It remains possible that this will occur in a matter of months.

When that day comes, community groups, social service agencies, unions, churches, national organizations and networks, attorneys, funders, financial institutions, local and state governments, and immigrants themselves will mobilize on an unprecedented scale to disseminate accurate information, provide quality services, expand immigrant integration, and encourage increased civic participation.

This track employs interactive approaches to illuminating and discussing the challenges, opportunities, and ongoing and future work to build capacity for the "Path." Should immigration reform falter in the short term, such innovations, capacities, strategies, collaborations, and campaigns will be valuable to serve and organize immigrants more dynamically. Implementation of CIR: Messaging, Outreach, Education

SYMPHONY III

This session will offer a very interactive and audience-driven discussion on issues of outreach and education regarding the Comprehensive Immigration Reform implementation process. The focus will be on surfacing and understanding the best messaging/outreach strategies to connect with and meet the informational needs of the wide range of constituencies involved, both immigrant communities and stakeholder organizations. These include immigrant communities generally, immigrant students, immigrants in rural areas, specific ethnic/national groups, community-based organizations, national/regional advocacy groups, legal services providers, public sector institutions (schools, city council offices, etc.), funders, businesses, faith communities, and potential nonimmigrant organizational allies. The session was developed by Fred Tsao, Illinois Coalition for Immigrant and Refugee Rights; Jeff Gross, Massachusetts Immigrant and Refugee Advocacy Coalition; and the Preparing for the Path work group.

Immigration Enforcement (After Reform)

MONDAY, 2:30 TO 4:00 PM
SYMPHONY III

The immigration reform conversation is focused on the "path to citizenship." Other elements of reform will just as dramatically affect what life looks like for immigrants. After reform, the work of the movement to ensure the dignity and rights of immigrants and nonimmigrants will be no less vital. At the same time a legalization program may create a new category of legalized immigrant and new protections from detention and deportation for certain immigrants.

JEFF BONG

The focus of interior enforcement — after prosecutorial discretion, Deferred Action for Childhood Arrivals, and legislation — could change dramatically. Yet what will this mean for immigrants rendered ineligible or inadmissible to legalize?

The panel will explore what advocacy against immigration enforcement looks like after possible reform. The panelists will discuss the new enforcement regime and strategies to fight back against employer abuses of the E-verify system, to beat back state engagement in enforcement of laws in the wake of authorities in the SAFE Act or similar legislation, and to mitigate the damage that excessive border enforcement does to border communities, assuming something like S744 passes.

Power for the Long Haul: Building Your Individual Membership Base for Organizing, Sustainability

MONDAY, 2:30 TO 4:00 PM
SYMPHONY IV

This will be a working session focused on strategies for developing and growing a membership in the environment after or in lieu of Comprehensive Immigration Reform. The purpose of the session is to give organizations who are using the implementation wave as a way to build their base of individual members 1) the tools they need to understand what this shift means for their organization, 2) the tools they need to make the shift, and 3) a learning community of other organizations that will be doing the same.

The session will also discuss how these strategies may be adapted to continue to build a base and membership even if CIR is delayed. Participants will hear from representatives of organizations with experience building large memberships and those who are experimenting with new strategies for membership growth. The session was developed by Nisha Agarwal, Center for Popular Democracy; Marissa Graciosa, Center for Community Change; and the Preparing for the Path work group.

TUESDAY, 11:00 AM TO 12:30 PM

How can we build successful local and statewide collaborations to prepare for immigration reform implementation? What is the role of government in successful implementation and integration? This session will draw from the experience of nonprofit and government leaders to discuss the value and challenges of convening state and local tables to build capacity for reform and beyond. Getting a Lot More: Funding, Resource Development for Legalization Implementation

SYMPHONY IV

This highly interactive session will engage participants in thinking about, and setting expectations for, how they will resource their legalization implementation work. It will begin by having participants chart their projected funding and resource needs and indicate roughly the proportion of resources that they expect from various sources. Participants will hear briefly from a local and national funder, a membership-based organization, and a direct service provider on what they expect regarding the availability of resources for legalization implementation. Participants will then engage in a full group discussion on the opportunities and challenges ahead.

The session will close with a shout out of big ideas for what else might be possible in the realm of getting a lot more. The session was developed by Matthew Burnett, Immigration Advocates Network, Larry Kleinman, CAPACES Leadership Institute, and the Preparing for the Path work group.

BLUE TRACK SESSIONS

Protecting Rights, Expanding Freedoms

This track explores the challenges, intersections, and opportunities around defending the rights and freedoms of migrants, regardless of whether they are new immigrants, legal permanent residents, or citizens. Sessions will explore how the demographic changes of migration and displacement impact the workforce and how organizing and policy wins have provided relief and empowerment to immigrants, refugees, and guest workers.

Sessions will also discuss effective practices to create safe and integrated communities for LGBTQ immigrants and refugees; work with allies and law enforcement to fight the immigrant-to-prison pipeline; and collaborative law and organizing strategies to help defend against harsh enforcement, expand access to services, and build long-term power to revitalize American democracy. LGBTQ Immigrant, Refugee Integration

SYMPHONY II

As we work toward creating more immigrant-friendly communities, we cannot forget those who live on the margins. There are close to one million lesbian, gay, bisexual, and transgender adult immigrants living in the United States. LGBT immigrants, documented and undocumented, and refugees encounter some very specific challenges as they try to integrate into their communities. Many may live in immigrant enclaves and work or socialize in “gayborhoods,” yet are never completely out or feel welcomed or safe due to xenophobic rhetoric, as well as homophobia and transphobia.

This workshop will highlight some recent data available about LGBT immigrants from the Williams Institute and the Center for American Progress. It will address some of the particular challenges that LGBT immigrants and refugees face, and participants will learn tools to serve this community better. Participants will be engaged around best practices in terms of building meaningful relationships with a diverse LGBT immigrant population, from “undocu-queer” youth to older LGBT adults, and the broader LGBT community.

LGBT immigrants and refugees are already part of our communities. Let’s make sure they, too, feel welcomed! The session was developed by Luis Roman,

Refugees, Guest Workers, Workers’ Rights

MONDAY, 2:30 TO 4:00 PM
PICASSO

Join this important conversation about the intersection of workers’ rights, refugee resettlement, and guest worker programs. With increased immigration enforcement, there is an increasing reliance of employers on refugees and guest workers for low-wage work in the meat-packing, tourism, service, and other industries. This is causing challenges in the areas of workplace protections and intergroup relations, but opportunities exist for collegial work between refugee resettlement agencies, government, employers, labor, and community leaders.

Panelists will identify opportunities for intentioned collaboration to meet the complementary goals of employment, worker protections, and positive relationships among newcomers working in various industries. All attendees will brainstorm concrete steps that can be taken on the local and national levels to bridge the gaps sometimes found between refugee communities, guest workers and workers' rights movements.

Freedom From Fear: Fighting Back the Immigrant-to-Prison Pipeline

TUESDAY, 11:00 AM TO 12:30 PM
DEGAS

Whether it's 287g agreements, Secure Communities, detention centers, or private prisons, immigrants are the fastest growing population in the prison system. But there are people in Florida and around the country who are fighting back against the immigrant-to-prison pipeline.

Participants will have the opportunity to hear and learn from a diverse group of panelists about enforcement policies that criminalize communities of color in Florida. They will learn about the strategies and tactics that are being used to fight back. They will also have the opportunity to hear wisdom from a retired law enforcement official on how to build alliances with local and state law enforcement.

GREEN TRACK SESSIONS

Receiving Communities

The Receiving Communities track focuses on promoting practices and policies to create welcoming, immigrant-friendly, and economically vibrant communities where immigrants, refugees, and native-born residents can thrive and transform their communities. Helping long-term receiving-community members understand who immigrants are and how they contribute to the quality of life for the entire community builds the will and resources to integrate new arrivals successfully.

Come learn from a growing number of forward-thinking local governments that recognize the imperative of welcoming newcomers in order to maintain their standing as the nation's engines of innovation and growth as they usher in a new set of integration initiatives.

Track sessions will also explore how tensions fueled by religious and racial differences can be addressed by identifying shared concerns and promoting active processes of engagement to build empathy, connection, and community, and by using institutions like schools to build bridges between established and newcomer families.

Involving the receiving community is more important now than ever as Congress debates major immigration reform and many states and localities consider their approach to immigrant integration. Sharing model approaches to increase support for immigrants as assets and essential contributors to community vibrancy will continue to pay dividends whether or not Congress acts on immigration reform. Welcoming Cities, Metropolitan Innovation

MONDAY 10:15 TO 11:45 AM
CONCERTO A

Metropolitan areas are increasingly on the front lines of tackling some of the nation's greatest challenges. Cities and their nearby metro areas are becoming the engines of innovation and growth. With immigrants accounting for the lion's share of the nation's population and labor force expansion, there is increased recognition of their role in fueling economic dynamism locally. Forward-thinking local governments see welcoming immigrants and helping them integrate into their communities as vital to their future vibrancy and success. This session will explore the imperatives for municipalities promoting the full civic, political, and economic integration of immigrants, and connecting them to the longer-term receiving community in the process. In this hands-on training, learn how dialogue can be used to share experiences, help people appreciate new viewpoints, and build empathy, connection, and community. This session will showcase a model for dialogue that incorporates aspects of the Theater of the Oppressed, a methodology that promotes social and political change. Come experience first-hand a dialogue model simulation that helps people connect across complex issues and can be used back in your community, building greater understanding between immigrants and diverse receiving-communities members. Strategies for Promoting Welcoming Cities, Counties

MONDAY, 2:30 TO 4:00 PM

Recognizing that immigrants offer cities a competitive advantage, municipalities are increasingly seeking ways to attract, retain, and welcome them. This session will explore concrete strategies city and county governments across the nation are using to draw immigrants to their communities, facilitate their integration, and help them set down roots.

Four municipalities will talk about strategies that have worked in different political, geographic, and demographic contexts, and how those contexts influence the range of policy options. Moving Beyond Difference to Welcome Diversity, Strengthen Communities

CONCERTO B

Religious and racial differences continue to challenge communities and bring urgency to this work. When tensions are addressed successfully, often through the identification of shared concerns, there is an opportunity to create greater understanding and reduce divisiveness in communities.

This session will explore examples of how communities are coming together and overcoming tensions that have arisen around specific sets of newcomers such as day laborers and refugees, around religious differences such as Islam, and around race. Come with examples of your own struggles to bridge differences and receive guidance from others in a safe and supportive environment. The session was developed by the Receiving Communities work group.

Strengthening Refugee Resettlement, Fostering Welcoming Communities

TUESDAY, 11:00 AM TO 12:30 PM
CONCERTO A

Refugee resettlement works best when the whole community is involved, with efforts focused not only on meeting immediate needs like housing and employment for newcomers but also on the longer-term work of building greater understanding between community members. Engaging the broader receiving community in the process is important for refugee success, so that longer-term members of communities understand who refugees are and why they are here and can take an active role in helping them become fully contributing members of the community.

This session will explore how diverse community groups are working to build greater support for refugees and the kinds of collaborations underway in communities that want to deepen their level of support for refugees, as well as those who have experienced backlash in recent years. Gateways to the Community: Role of Welcoming Schools

CONCERTO B

Schools have a unique role in bridging divides between newcomer and longer-term students and families and helping all students succeed. How can schools best adapt to demographic change and serve as community leaders in promoting integration for immigrant and refugee children and their families? How can these efforts promote deeper parent involvement and a welcoming climate in which young people are motivated to learn and achieve?

Using a series of film clips from the award-winning film I Learn America, this discussion will provide an opportunity to explore how to create school environments in which all students feel welcome, and there will be an opportunity for the participants to share their school-based work and to consider ways to work together to promote welcoming schools. IMMIGRANT INTEGRATION VISION

A vision for immigrant integration inspired by Miami NIIC 2013

MONDAY, 4:30 TO 5:30 PM
MOTOR LOBBY

At this historic crossroads for new Americans in the United States, Miami NIIC 2013 will shape the future direction of immigrant inclusion and integration efforts in America.

The National Partnership for New Americans, NIIC's primary sponsor, and our cosponsoring networks and organizations, including the National Association of Latino Community Asset Builders, Welcoming America, the New Americans Campaign, the Migration Policy Institute, the Center for Community Change, and Refugee Council USA, have worked collaboratively to design the 2013 Miami conference and build a vision and framework for our collective work in 2014 and beyond.

Over the coming year, together we will advance the integration of immigrants into American society on three fronts: at the local, state, and federal levels in order to create an authentic and welcoming democracy in which new Americans can achieve equal opportunity, dignity and respect, full participation in civic life, and economic prosperity.

At next year's NIIC 2014 conference in Los Angeles, we will review progress made on the following goals and strategize together on our future collective priorities for immigrant integration.

These goals are organized loosely around the main themes of the NIIC 6 conference tracks and plenaries and cover local as well as international issues and trends, and everything in between.

Facilitators:

Julien Ross
Executive Director
Colorado Immigrant Rights
Coalition

Angelica Salas
Executive Director

of Los Angeles

Immigrant Integration

We will work together to strengthen a powerful and collegial infrastructure for immigrant integration that includes service providers, government, advocacy organizations, and receiving community stakeholders:

Create new offices of new Americans to promote a proactive strategy for immigrant integration, beginning with the White House and extending to state and municipal governments.

Citizenship

We will work together to remove barriers to US citizenship:

Reduce the barriers for immigrants to become naturalized US citizens, beginning with the high cost that so negatively impacts the working poor Mexican American population — anything other than cost for this section, complexity of changes to the application, for instance.

Human Capital Development

We will work together to ensure that each person is able to maximize his or her own potential and contribute fully to his or her family and community:

- Create an Integration Success Fund as part of any federal immigration reform legislation to support strategic investments at the state and local levels in the economic and linguistic integration of immigrants and their children.
- Work across many stakeholder groups to foster a more welcoming climate for new Americans through dialogue, public education, and policy development.
- Encourage and assist local, state, and federal governments that work with immigrants, receiving communities, and integration partners to support broad-scale immigrant inclusion through new programs, policies, and networks.

Preparing for the Path

We will work together to build the capacity effectively to assist immigrants to adjust their status and become legal immigrants and citizens to respond to any and all opportunities for legalization that may arise:

- Create a network of organizations both nationally and locally that can deliver large-scale immigrant integration services, including naturalization, Deferred Action for Childhood Arrivals, and processing under any federal legislative reform. This network will provide quality legal and integration services at scale, encourage volunteerism, and operate with the goal of empowering both the individuals served and the participating communities. This network will operate collaboratively across the advocacy, service, government, asset building, and legal fields, with the leadership and full participation of immigrant organizations.

- Pass immigration reform that protects and integrates refugees and provides robust funding and flexibility for refugee assistance, particularly for case management, self-sufficiency and integration services for migrants served by the US Department of Health and Human Services Office of Refugee Resettlement, the US Department of Homeland Security Office of Citizenship, and the US Department of State.

Rights, Freedoms

We will work together to extend basic rights and freedoms to all in the workplace and the immigration and criminal justice systems.

- Build cross-sector partnerships to address the abuse of immigrant and refugee workers in the workplace.
- Encourage dialogue and action that create positive police-community relations, and fight against attitudes, policies, and programs that encourage racial profiling or profiting from the criminalization of immigrants.

Global Mass Migration

We will actively reach out to transnational policy and migrant organizations to build a community of learning and solidarity for immigrant integration and migrants across the world:

Organize and participate in exchanges of migrant leaders from the United States with migrant leaders from other parts of the world.

Facilitated by Julien Ross, executive director of Colorado Immigrant Rights Coalition and incoming cochair of the National Partnership for New Americans, and Angelica Salas, executive director of the Coalition for Humane Immigrant Rights of Los Angeles and NIIC 2014 host.

This plan was developed by Rich Stolz, OneAmerica, and Julien Ross, Colorado Immigrant Rights Coalition, with the support of Margie McHugh, Migration Policy Institute; Susan Downs-Karkos and David Lubell, Welcoming America; Larry Kleinman, CAPACES Leadership Institute; Jeremy Carter, National Association for Latino Community Asset Builders; Josh Hoyt, National Partnership for New Americans; and Maria Rodriguez, Florida Immigrant Coalition.

National Partnership for New Americans

OUTLINE OF PRINCIPLES OF IMMIGRANT INTEGRATION

The National Partnership for New Americans’ advocacy for the immigrant integration principles outlined below has resulted in our language being included in the Border Security, Economic Opportunity, and Immigration Modernization Act of 2013.

In addition to reducing the naturalization fee and other advocacy goals, the partnership strongly supports Congress’ creating and funding a National Office on Immigration Policy within the Executive Office of the President. This office would drive a national strategy for immigrant integration that would coordinate policies and programs across federal agencies and with state and local governments.

The partnership believes that immigrant integration is a two-way process that strengthens the systems and tools that allow immigrants in the US to participate fully in their families, jobs, and communities, and that benefits all Americans by providing immigrants with the opportunity to contribute to their fullest capacity to those jobs and communities and to the strength of the nation as a whole.

The partnership advances six principles that we believe provide the foundation for a robust and comprehensive policy for immigrant integration.

1. Strengthen pathways to naturalization and full civic participation for legal permanent residents.
2. Create opportunities for immigrants to receive English literacy, civic education, and continuing education.
3. Expand immigrant access to labor markets and economic opportunity through strengthening workforce development, professional integration, and immigrant entrepreneurship.
4. Ensure that immigrants receive equitable access to services.
5. Improve access to early education and care that secures a strong future for children in immigrant and mixed-status families.
6. Support communities in creating a welcoming climate for immigrants and their successful integration.

For more on the partnership’s immigrant integration principles, please visit www.partnershipfornewamericans.org.

FACTS ABOUT IMMIGRANT INTEGRATION

There are 8.7 million legal permanent residents who could naturalize today, but in 2012, only 8.6 percent of the total eligible became citizens.

The time a minimum-wage employee must work to pay the $680 US citizenship application: two weeks and two days.

Between 2002 and 2009, immigrants contributed $115 billion more to the Medicare program than they drew out.

According to the National Foundation for American Policy, immigrants will add a net of $611 billion to the Social Security system over the next 75 years.

The cost to renew your green card for ten years is $450, which is $230 less than the cost to apply for citizenship.

Seventy-two percent of naturalized citizens are homeowners, versus 45 percent of noncitizen immigrants.

Naturalized citizens are more likely than noncitizen immigrants to live above the poverty line: Six percent of new Americans live below the poverty line versus 16 percent of noncitizens.

Naturalized citizens earn between eight and 11 percent higher wages after naturalization. This means that if half of the 8.7 million people eligible to naturalize became citizens, it would add between $21 billion and $45 billion to the US economy over five years.

Of all eligible Medicaid potential recipients, only 60–70 percent are actually enrolled, and that number is much lower in immigrant communities because of barriers like language, misinformation about eligibility, transportation, etc.

After the naturalization price increase in fiscal year 2007, the number of naturalization applications submitted decreased by 62 percent in 2008.

The naturalized-citizen population from the Middle East is a relatively small 726,000. But its numbers grew 156 percent from 1995 to 2005. Middle Easterners were increasingly likely to naturalize after 2001.

Corrections Corp. of America, GEO Group Inc., and other for-profit prison operators hold almost two thirds of all immigrants detained each day in federally funded prisons as they face deportation.

Federal law requires that the government contract for at least 34,000 prison beds a day, even as border crossings have declined since the recession. The US Immigration and Customs Enforcement Agency pays $2 billion a year to meet the bed quota and incarcerate the required number of immigrants.

Between 1892 and 1997, a total of 2.1 million people were deported from the United States. Between 2008 and 2012, 1.5 million people have been deported. That number is estimated to reach two million by 2014.

Deferred Action for Childhood Arrivals grantees are ineligible for Medicaid, Children’s Health Insurance Program, and Affordable Care Act benefits.

Only six states — California, Illinois, Washington, New Mexico, Maryland, and Utah — issue (or will issue) cards granting driving privileges to undocumented immigrants, but many make the cards invalid for identification purposes.

After President Obama’s June 15, 2012, announcement of Deferred Action for Childhood Arrivals, organizations had only 60 days to prepare for a wave that few had previously expected. In DACA’s first 100 days, 350,000 applications were submitted.

Nurturing Naturalization: Could Lowering the Fee Help?

REPORT EXPLORES OBSTACLES TO CITIZENSHIP

Released by the Center for the Study of Immigrant Integration and the National Partnership for New Americans, Nurturing Naturalization: Could Lowering the Fee Help? explores the obstacles to citizenship for aspiring Americans by focusing on the fees associated with the naturalization process. Through original analysis of new data on naturalization from the Office of Immigration Statistics and the American Community Survey, the report indicates that fee increases can have a significant impact on both the volume and the composition of who naturalizes.

Major findings include:

- The price of the naturalization application (N-400) jumped from $260 in 2002 to $330 in 2005 to double the price at $675 in 2007. Before the price jump in 2007, there was a surge of submitted applications and after the price jump, in 2008, the number of submitted applications dropped by 62 percent.

- Those with a high school education or less saw a dramatic decrease in naturalizations after 2008, falling from about 25 percent in 2007 to about 17 percent in 2010. Those with a bachelor degree or higher increased during the same time period.
- The dramatic increases in naturalization fees in the last decade and a half have created a significant barrier to US citizenship for many but emphatically for legal Mexican immigrants whose naturalization rates decreased significantly after the 2007 price jump.
- Naturalization seems to be responsive to price, particularly to the differential between renewing a Green Card (at $430) and the cost of naturalization (at the current $680).
- The data suggest that fee increases, particularly the very significant increase in 2007, may have had a negative impact on the rate of naturalization.

In short, price matters. Previous research has demonstrated that naturalization can improve incomes and enhance civic participation. For a nation of immigrants, encouraging naturalization and full participation in our civic and economic life would seem to be one of those goals on which many Americans can agree, and so it seems entirely appropriate to change the fee structure to reduce the financial barriers to integrating fully into our society, economy, and democracy.

National Partnership for New Americans

HISTORY OF THE PARTNERSHIP

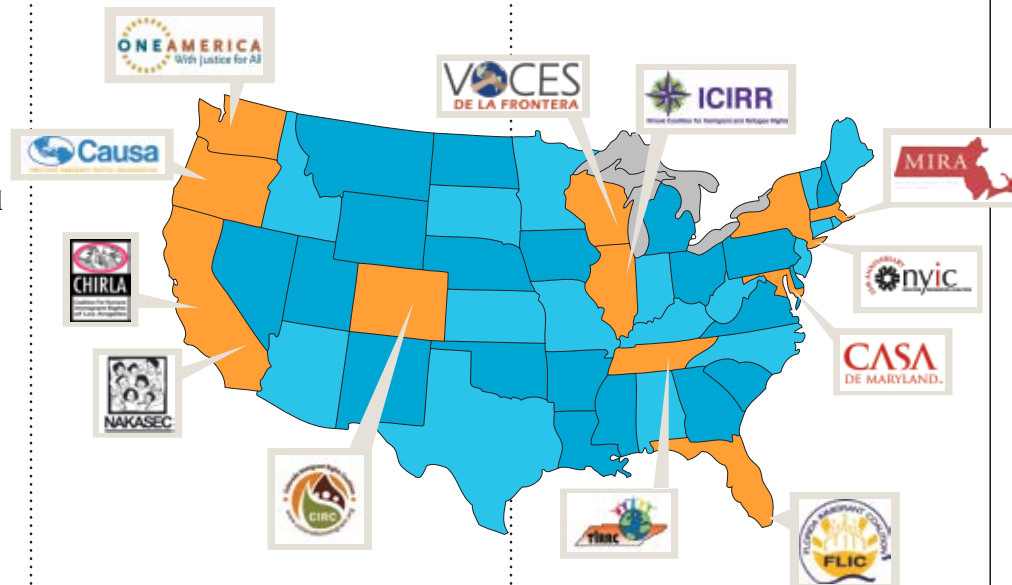

The National Partnership for New Americans was formed by prominent immigrant rights advocacy organizations that united together to hold annual National Immigrant Integration Conferences, which would become a key-stone project of the partnership, first Chicago in 2008, then Denver in 2009. At the 2010 conference in Boston, this loose collaborative decided formally to become the National Partnership for New Americans, made up of:

- CASA de Maryland
- CaUSA (Oregon)
- Coalition for Humane Immigrant Rights of Los Angeles (CHIRLA)
- Colorado Immigrant Rights Coalition (CIRC)
- Florida Immigrant Coalition (FLIC)
- Illinois Coalition for Immigrant and Refugee Rights (ICIRR)
- Massachusetts Immigrant and Refugee Advocacy Coalition (MIRA)
- National Korean American Service & Education Consortium (NAKASEC)
- New York Immigration Coalition (NYIC)
- OneAmerica (Washington)
- Tennessee Immigrant and Refugee Rights Coalition (TIRRC)
- Voces de la Frontera (Wisconsin)

The partnership's mission is to advance the integration and active citizenship of immigrants to achieve a vibrant, just, and welcoming democracy for all.

In 2012, the partnership began a pressing, ambitious "Become a Citizen Now" campaign to help eight million legal permanent residents across the United States take the huge step to become naturalized US citizens.

In August, that model was amended to also help the hundreds of thousands of young people applying for the new Deferred Action for Childhood Arrivals, a new program meant to alleviate temporarily the legal and economic limbo suffered by young people brought to this country without status.

The partnership has also led a campaign to reduce the cost of citizenship for working poor immigrants, develop municipal partnerships to promote naturalization, and work closely with national organizations to take the lead on immigration reform implementation preparation.

January 2012 to June 2013

IN 18 MONTHS, NATIONAL PARTNERSHIP FOR NEW AMERICANS HAS:

- Commissioned the February 2013 study Nurturing Naturalization: Could Lowering the Fee Help? by distinguished scholar Manuel Pastor at the University of Southern California Center for the Study of Immigrant Integration (CSII), showing that the current fee structure prices out the working poor and Mexican immigrants.
- Gained the commitment from US Citizenship and Immigration Services Director Alejandro Mayorkas to stabilize the cost of naturalization application fees. Since 2008 the cost of citizenship has increased to only $680 from $675 since Director Mayorkas took office.
- Launched the Becoming Americans campaign advocating USCIS to re-examine its fee structure and to reduce the costs of US citizenship, especially for the working poor.

- Directly assisted 23,725 immigrants and their children to complete their applications for US citizenship.
- Assisted 7,522 low-income immigrants to become US citizens with fee waiver applications.
- Saved $28,839,960 for our communities in fee waivers and legal assistance.
- Held 413 citizenship clinics in 11 states by 12 partners.
- Trained 15,705 legal and general volunteers to assist legal permanent residents to become citizens.
- Assisted 88,826 legal permanent residents assisted through partnership naturalization programs
- Informed 19,294 undocumented youth about their DACA eligibility.
- Assisted 3,002 undocumented youth to complete their DACA applications.
- Saved $6,004,000 (conservative estimate) in legal fees for DACA applicants.

INATION KIOSK

Create, share, watch personal iNation immigration stories

OVERTURE FOYER II, TABLE 1

The United States is shaped by immigration. Most families have a story about it. Immigrant Nation (iNation) is a living collection of these stories, past and present. An online platform and short film series that works at the intersection of documentary film, user-generated storytelling, and social mapping, iNation creates a seamless experience that allows users to create, share, and watch personal immigration stories.

Visit the National Immigration Integration Conference iNation kiosk, located in Overture Foyer II, Table 1, to add your own story to the collection and see it interact with the timelines, countries, and memories of other users and conference goers. Share family photos and categorize your story with the tags #NIIC and #activevoice and start your own tags for your state or organization.

If you don't have time to stop by during the conference, add your story on the beta online platform of iNation at beta.immigrant-nation.com. Take some time to reconnect with your own place in immigration history and what drives you to do the work you do, every day.

USCIS NATURALIZATION CEREMONY

SYMPHONY I

Join an emotional ceremony conducted by the US Citizenship and Immigration Services as the triumphant, symbolic conclusion to our sixth annual National Immigrant Integration Conference. Bear witness as our newest fellow citizens take the oath of allegiance to the United States of America:

I hereby declare, on oath, that I absolutely and entirely renounce and abjure all allegiance and fidelity to any foreign prince, potentate, state, or sovereignty, of whom or which I have heretofore been a subject or citizen; that I will support and defend the Constitution and laws of the United States of America against all enemies, foreign and domestic; that I will bear true faith and allegiance to the same; that I will bear arms on behalf of the United States when required by the law; that I will perform noncombatant service in the Armed Forces of the United States when required by the law; that I will perform work of national importance under civilian direction when required by the law; and that I take this obligation freely, without any mental reservation or purpose of evasion; so help me God.
